

Index to Egyptian sites

1 Introduction

Since this web site has collected material from many different sources, there is a problem indexing them, since each source may not have used the same name. For Cairo, the number of monuments is large and the naming is not standardized, so this document aims to aid the user to navigate to any desired site in Egypt.

In constructing this index, six main sources have been used: the [Archnet] web site which often provides alternative names for site, the [Discover] web site which provides excellent detail on many sites; the web site [Thesaurus] which provides the Comité Numbering of sites (but is not open to Google searches); the book [Williams] which has a good index and covers the material a tourist would need; the electronic document [Warner] and [O’Kane]. Finally, individual experts have been consulted but are not listed since I would not wish errors to be associated with them!

2.1 Notes

1. The word 'Madrasah' is used here to avoid regional variations.
2. For brevity, the words Mosque or Madrasah are (usually) omitted in the title used for a building, unless required (as with al-Nasir Muhammad).
3. The transcription of Arabic to Latin characters varies, which causes problem with the buildings listed here. Not all possible alternatives could be listed.
4. [Warner] has used an additional numbering system not covered by Comité which we use here.
5. Note that the V&A minbar has not been identified as coming from the Sultan Shah mosque in Cairo by the museum due to lack of hard evidence.
6. Note that Monuments 121 and 175 (al-Ashraf Barsbay) are taken together on the web site.
